Could Bird Flu Potentially Be the Next Engineered Pandemic?

Sixbert SANGWA • November 19, 2024

In an era of global health uncertainties, a controversial document titled "Locked and Loaded" has emerged, sparking intense debate about the potential for a premeditated bird flu pandemic. Karen Kingston, a biotech analyst and former Pfizer employee, who was one of the first to warn about the nightmare of the CV19 mRNA nanoparticle bioweapon vaccines, has brought this document to light, raising alarming questions about the weaponization of the H5N1 influenza virus and the ethical implications of vaccine development.
Kingston's revelations have ignited discussions on pandemic preparedness, public health strategies, and the delicate balance between scientific advancement and public safety. Critics argue that such information could erode trust in health authorities, while supporters view it as a crucial call for transparency and accountability in global health initiatives (Hunter, 2024).
As the world continues to navigate ongoing health crises, understanding the complex interplay between public health, policy, and potential hidden agendas becomes increasingly vital. This situation presents a unique challenge for Christians, who must discern the nature of these global events through the lens of biblical prophecy while maintaining faith in the face of uncertainty.

Warning Signs: The Bird Flu Vaccine and Biowarfare Allegations

In a recent interview with Greg Hunter (2024), Karen Kingston made several startling revelations. She highlighted a planned "bird flu genocide" involving the deliberate release of a highly pathogenic avian influenza virus. Kingston described a strategy to familiarize the public with flu vaccines by initially releasing harmless versions, then switching to lethal formulations once a pandemic is declared. She also warned of a plot to sabotage the food supply, particularly targeting poultry and eggs. Kingston revealed that vaccines currently in development for bird flu are actually bioweapons designed to harm rather than protect against the disease. According to her the H5N1 vaccines will likely cause waves of hospitalizations and deaths, especially among those with immune systems weakened by COVID-19 vaccines. In fact, Kingston's statements suggest that certain organizations or governments are orchestrating a pandemic and food crisis for sinister purposes.

Karen Kingston has strongly exposed the planned rollout of H5N1 bird flu vaccines, describing them as weapons of biowarfare. She alleges that the FDA has explicitly stated that these vaccines will be released without adequate safety, efficacy, or immune response data—even skipping animal testing. Such a reckless approach endangers millions and mirrors the expedited processes seen during the COVID-19 vaccine rollout. Kingston asserts: "This is literally the definition of biowarfare... It's more about unleashing the vaccines than it is about the virus." (Kingstone, 2024).

Jessica Rose (2024), a prominent truth-seeker who has gained recognition across Canada and worldwide, concurs with Kingston's findings. She emphasizes the recklessness of the situation, citing evidence that Arcturus Therapeutics has received FDA clearance to initiate clinical trials for an H5N1 pandemic flu vaccine (see evidence from: Business Wire, 2024).

Similarly, former CDC Director Robert Redfield has raised alarms about the potential for a bird flu pandemic in humans. In an interview with Brian, he stated:

> "Yes, Brian, I really do think it's very likely that we will at some time. It's not a question of if. It's more of a question of when we will have a bird flu pandemic. As you mentioned, unfortunately, bird flu has, when it does enter humans, has a significant mortality, probably somewhere between 25 and 50% mortality. So it's going to be quite complicated. Once the virus gains the ability to attach to the human receptor and then go human to human, that's when you're going to have the pandemic. And as I said I think it's just a matter of time." (NewsNation, 2024)

Similarly, Dr. Peter A. McCullough, in his recent tweet, warned about the potential for a bird flu outbreak. In an interview with Vigilant News (2024), he raised concerns about the ongoing threat of H5N1 bird flu, especially given recent outbreaks among wild birds and poultry. His insights highlight the potential for sporadic human cases, emphasizing the need for vigilance in monitoring and managing this virus. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has also highlighted the significant risk of H5N1 bird flu infection among exposed populations. The agency reports that while human-to-human transmission remains rare, the risk of infection in exposed groups, such as dairy farm workers, is substantial (CDC, 2024). Kingstone notes that human-human transmission of the flu virus is rare but warns about the virus being mutated to increase its contagiousness to mammals (Kingston, 2024).

So, the whistleblowers and doctors, along with CDC officials, are predicting this will happen. But how can they be so certain? What evidence do they have that a deadlier strain will suddenly emerge? As Odessa (2024) puts it, it's noteworthy that preparations for vaccine collaboration are already underway. Meanwhile, as health officials claim to be rushing to implement safeguards for both people and livestock, the consensus among scientists is clear: "mass human-to-human transmission of bird flu is not a question of if, but when". Despite that knowledge, none is talking about monitoring migratory waterfowl, which play a crucial role in transmitting the virus across vast distances! Only then might officials declare, "Yes, it's positive," potentially prompting widespread vaccination—exactly as globalists planned.

Kingston reveals a disturbing plan to acclimate the public to flu vaccines through a multi-stage approach. Initially, innocuous versions would be released, followed by a switch to highly pathogenic and deadly formulations once a pandemic is declared. She warns that H5N1 vaccines are likely to cause waves of hospitalizations and deaths, particularly among those whose immune systems were weakened by COVID-19 vaccines. Kingston describes this strategy as a psychological operation designed to exploit public trust in "the science." Furthermore, she disclosed that three types of H5N1 bird flu vaccines are currently ready for deployment. These include CSL Seqirus' Adjuvanted Vaccine, a protein-based vaccine using an oil-in-water emulsion adjuvant to enhance immune response; BARDA's Self-Amplifying mRNA Vaccine, a new generation of mRNA vaccines that replicate within the body for a stronger response; and CEPI's Korean Quadrivalent Vaccine, a formulation combining multiple flu strains, including both avian and swine variants, aimed at broad-spectrum immunization (Kingston,2024).

Moreover, the vaccines themselves reportedly contain disease-causing agents. Dr. Jerry Weir of the FDA is cited as describing these as "highly pathogenic"(Weir, 2024)—a term explicitly referring to their dangerous, disease-causing nature. Kingston emphasizes, "We can assume these are dangerous. I hate to say unsafe because that is not accurate. We should call these danger profiles, not safety profiles."

Odessa (2024) provides a detailed look into the tabletop exercise conducted on October 2-4, 2024, simulating responses to a severe avian influenza outbreak. This exercise bears a striking resemblance to Event 201, a pandemic simulation held in October 2019, just months before the COVID-19 outbreak. The bird flu exercise covers scenarios including morgue overflow, vaccine distribution, isolation measures, and focuses on communication protocols during a crisis. These preparations align with the concerns raised by Kingston and others about a potential manufactured pandemic.

The parallels between this bird flu simulation and Event 201 are hard to ignore. Just as Event 201 seemed to foreshadow the COVID-19 pandemic, this exercise raises questions about whether it might be laying the groundwork for a future bird flu outbreak. The existence of such detailed planning exercises suggests that health authorities and governments are actively preparing for a severe bird flu outbreak scenario. While preparedness is generally positive, the context of these preparations—alongside warnings from whistleblowers and the eerie similarity to pre-COVID-19 simulations—raises serious questions about the true nature and intent of these exercises.

A Manufactured Crisis: The Destruction of the Food Supply

Adding to the concerns about biowarfare is the alleged deliberate destruction of the food supply. Kingston highlights examples of recent recalls, such as over 10 million pounds of meat and poultry being removed from shelves due to supposed listeria contamination—without a single reported case of illness. Such actions, coupled with the FDA's reported plans to use grocery rewards programs to track consumers' purchases of "contaminated" foods, suggest a move toward heightened control of resources and individual freedoms. This mirrors a broader pattern of leveraging fear to gain power. By portraying the food supply as a source of potential outbreaks, authorities could justify seizing control of distribution chains. Kingston predicts that such measures will culminate in significant disruptions, leaving societies more dependent on centralized authorities—a scenario eerily aligned with the mechanisms described in Revelation, where control over economic and social participation becomes absolute (Revelation 13:16-17).

The Spiritual Dimension: Deception in the Last Days

The Bible forewarns of widespread deception and the rise of systems designed to control and manipulate humanity. Jesus cautioned: "For false messiahs and false prophets will arise and perform great signs and wonders to lead astray, if possible, even the elect" (Matthew 24:24). The increasing reliance on fear-driven narratives—be it through pandemics, food shortages, or economic instability—aligns with this prophetic warning. Such schemes pave the way for the Antichrist's global system, as described in Revelation 13, where deception, coercion, and allegiance to false authorities become widespread.

Conclusion:

The warnings from analysts like Karen Kingston remind us of the gravity of the times in which we live. The potential for a manufactured pandemic, coupled with plans to destabilize food systems, reflects the spiritual battle unfolding in our world. Yet, we are not without hope.

God's Word assures us of His ultimate victory: "The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it" (John 1:5). As believers, we are called to shine this light, to stand firm in truth, and to trust in the Lord's guidance through every storm. As salt and light in the world, believers have a responsibility to expose darkness with the light of truth. Jesus calls His followers to be a positive influence in society (Matthew 5:13-16), which includes uncovering and opposing evil schemes. By sharing truth, praying for wisdom, and educating others, Christians play a vital role in combating misinformation and spiritual deception.

By discerning the signs of the times and remaining anchored in faith, we can navigate these challenges with clarity, courage, and a steadfast commitment to the Gospel. Jesus reminds us, "But the one who endures to the end will be saved" (Matthew 24:13). This promise of salvation for those who persevere should strengthen our resolve as we face uncertain times. While spiritual preparation is paramount, it's also important for believers to prepare practically. This can involve building local support networks and ensuring access to reliable resources, which can help mitigate the impact of potential disruptions. As we prepare, we can also look forward with hope to the promised Rapture, when Christ will return for His faithful followers (1 Thessalonians 4:16-17).
